

Privacy Policy

Cayuga Centers is committed to protecting the privacy of personal information provided to us. The following privacy policy describes how we handle information provided to us by our online visitors. The only information that Cayuga Centers collects through this website is that which you voluntarily provide, such as your name, email address, etc. We also collect non identifying information, including, but not limited to, how many people have visited our site, which sections of the site were visited, and what search terms were used. This information does not, however, identify any individual or track an individual's use of the Internet. Cayuga Centers uses the information to enhance your user experience and respond efficiently to your requests. Cayuga Centers does not rent, sell, trade, or exchange any information that you provide. We do not share any information unless we obtain your permission first. An exception to this policy is in the event that we need to respond to a legal process, court order, warrant, or to comply with a law or regulation. As a resource to our online visitors, Cayuga Centers occasionally provides links to other websites. While we try to provide links to websites that contain high-quality information, we cannot guarantee the existence of or be responsible for the quality of the content contained on those sites.